Documentation forms the framework whereby all interaction with employees is guided, from pay rate to protective wear, everything is defined and agreed upon at some point between the employer and the employee, set on paper and signed off by both parties.

- Contracts define rights and responsibilities
- Code of Conducts correct workplace behaviour
- SOP's and KPI's correct productivity
- ID copies are required for injury on duties etc.

To better manage documentation Omniform sets up a document compliance structure on a Job level detailing every document the employee would require to be fully compliant.

Once the employee is linked to a job specification. checks are in place to ensure all documents are signed off, either digitally or manually.

- Expiry dates are adhered to.
- Changes are recorded.

Every employee has a cloud-based profile where every document is continuously and easily accessible with individual access setups allowing for the right person to have access to the right documents.

Not only is the capturing and management of employee documentation a full time senior position, it is also is the the primary defense for an employer during arbitration
